SEARCH FOR GERMAN PARTIES KNOWN TO LAND IN GREENLAND

Greenland Authorities Notify U. S. Gov't That They Landed by Plane

PURPOSE IS UNKNOWN
Fact Led to U. S. Taking Over Defense of That Territory

By Kingsbury Smith
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Apr. 30.—A search is being made for an unknown number of German parties believed to be at large in Greenland, it was learned today.

The search is being conducted by the Greenland authorities, who notified the United States Government through the Danish Legation in Washington of the reported presence of the German parties.

Natives reported seeing the Germans land in several parts of Eastern Greenland from airplanes. Some of them came in planes which landed on the ice-caps, while others are believed to have been landed by parachute.

The Germans were seen as late as the latter part of last month. The number of them at large and their purpose is not known, but it was feared that unless measure were taken to put a stop to these activities sufficient forces might be landed over a period of time to seize Greenland from within.

It was this far on the part of both the Greenland authorities and the American Government which led to the decision to have the United States take over the defense of that territory.

It is assumed that the Germans landed in Greenland speak Danish fluently and probably have succeeded in mixing with some of the natives in the outlying districts.

American officials are hopeful the mere announcement of this Government's decision to defend Greenland will be sufficient to put a stop to any further landings of German parties in that territory. However, American armed forces will soon be stationed there to make doubly sure that no attempt is made to seize the island.

It is possible that such forces already are en route, but whether they include troops or naval parties could not be ascertained. Such information is regarded as a "defense secret" and withheld by both the War and Navy Departments.

American officials are confident that the forces which will soon be established in Greenland will be sufficient to cope with any trouble from within or without.

Emergency Committees Discuss Work Outline

The various sub-committees for disaster preparedness and relief as outlined by the Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter of the American Red Cross met in Red Cross headquarters last night to perfect the Bristol organization.

There was a good attendance and the meeting was presided over by Chauncey E. Stoneback, Jr., as chairman of the group. The members of the committees were given a booklet outlining the functions of each. These are to be studied and at the next meeting to be held May 20th the duties of each committee will be discussed.

Chief of Police Linford J. Jones was requested to have a signal arranged which could be sounded in case of an emergency. Chief Jones stated that he would have to discuss this with Clifford Hagerman, chief of the Bristol Consolidated Fire Department, so as not to interfere with the signals which are now effective.

YOUNGEST LINGUIST IS 13-MONTHS-OLD BOY

Born In East Africa, Now Visiting In Doylestown

MADE 14,000-MILE TRIP

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 30.—A 13-month-old boy, born in East Africa, who made with his parents recently a 14,000-mile sea voyage, is the youngest linguist in Doylestown.

The child, Timothy Davis, son of the Rev. and Mrs. William I. Davis, missionaries on furlough from Nairobi, Kenya Colony, British East Africa, not only understands English at the age of 13 months, but also the native African colonial language.

As the baby nestled in his father's arms one day this week, the father said to him "Koma wega," at which command the child rested his head against his father's shoulder and relaxed.

"I was speaking the native language in a year's time," said Rev. Davis. "Koma wega," which he pronounced softly, "means as near as it is translatable in English, lie back well, sleep well or put your head back."

Kenya is as beautiful and attractive a city with a 10,000 population as any American city of similar size. There are electric lights, paved streets and all modern touches.

The Indian population is comprised of members of the Faith of Islam, Hindus, and Mohammedans. India is only a week's journey from the seaport city of Kenya Colony, hence the Indian atmosphere and influence.

Working in the mission field of the Gospel Furthering Fellowship, which maintains a mission station in Kenya, the Rev. Davis said there are six missionaries in Nairobi.

The Rev. and Mrs. Davis and another, who lives in Collingswood, N. J., comprise the three now on furlough. The Rev. Davis, who left here December 23, 1937, to join his fiancée, Miss Evelyn Thompson, already stationed there, and the latter were married in Africa. Mrs. Davis was in the mission field about five full years.

Nairobi is located about 6,000 feet above the sea level, making it very hot in the day time but delightfully cool at night. It is enhanced with beautiful foliage, lovely flowers of countless colors.

"We can buy two dozen carnations for 25 cents easily," said Rev. Davis, who added that "a dozen of lilies can be purchased for the same amount. So fragrant are the lilies that their odor becomes too pungent to make a room pleasant to remain in for a long time."

Touching on the ordinary things, because missionaries have to be practical, the former local athlete said gelatine is a luxury. "Here in the United States you can get gelatine for a nickel a package, but we have to pay 25 cents for one package, and canned fruit costs us 75 cents a can."

On the credit side there are delicious sweet native fruits, including papaya, mangoes, pineapples, bananas, oranges and grapefruits.

"Chicken is the main dish since it is impossible to keep meats over night except in a refrigerator. We longed for good meats. All our milk is boiled in order to avoid dysentery."

Rev. Davis said the natives are employed on the estates of coffee, sisal, a sort of hemp, and other plantations.

In Nairobi there are missionaries working in the mission fields of the Catholic, Scotch and English churches.

"Clothing, which is made by the Indians, is all English in texture, style and handicraft."

The Rev. Davis, who said all the missionaries in his field live in one large

Yugoslav Army Virtually Collapsed

With the German Balkan Army, Apr. 30—Yugoslavia's army virtually fell apart during the first days of the German Balkan campaign.

The Yugoslavian defenses cracked like a soft-boiled egg because the German Blitzkrieg delivered a mortal blow at vital border points, while the Luftwaffe poured down an incessant hail of death.

This swift attack left the Serbs virtually alone, without a chance of offering systematic resistance.

That, in brief, is the explanation for the astonishingly swift Yugoslavian military collapse, according to the evidence found while following the battle line of the German forces in the Balkans.

It also is the explanation for the comparatively limited destruction found in Yugoslavia. As an example of this, a survey of the main Yugoslavian battle fields from the Hungarian border to the Bulgarian frontier, there are two damaged villages, in addition to the war scarred towns of Belgrade and Nis. Haphazard battle lines in the field, scattered artillery batteries, mediocre equipment, under motorization and in some instances lack of genuine fighting spirit were the handicaps that doomed the Yugoslavians and even the Serbs, just 11 days after the Blitz began.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Pressure On The President

Washington, April 29. AS the seriousness of the British situation becomes clearer, apprehensions have increased in the country, and many who a few weeks ago were more or less complacent over the ineptitude of our defense effort and the failure effectively to implement our policy of "all-out" aid to England are beginning to be restive and resentful.

A FEELING of national peril impends. Doubt has spread among the people. There is doubt as to whether the British can survive despite our aid; doubt as to what our situation would be if the Germans should succeed in crushing the British; doubt as to whether we should conyoy and extend our aid or limit ourselves to the sort of "patrol" the President has described; doubt as to whether we should check our advance toward a more active participation in the war or restrict ourselves to entirely non-belligerent acts which fall short of our belligerent words.

Horn Arouses Community

(By "The Stroller")
The horn on an automobile parked on the lot at Wood and Walnut streets went "crazy" this morning at about 3:30 and without any warning started blowing its head off.

The residents of the neighborhood were aroused from their slumbers and telephones were pressed into service. The police were called and the radio car answered the summons only to find that the car with the noisy horn was securely locked. Then a member of the Bristol Consolidated Fire Department went to the scene to see if he could stop the horn but he was also baffled. A mechanic was gotten from a nearby garage but the hood of the car was fastened and could not be released except from the inside of the car.

Finally the owner appeared on the scene and unlocked the car and then the horn was disconnected and the community turned over and went to sleep.

PRICE FIXING

Leon Henderson's order freezing steel prices has not been accepted without some measure of grumbling on the part of industry. That, of course, was to be expected. But it is not likely that protests will go much beyond the grumbling stage, notwithstanding that in some quarters the suggestion has been made that a test of Mr. Henderson's power so to act be made in the courts.

Whatever powers he may have to fix commodity prices have been given him under executive order by the President, who in turn acts under "authority vested in me by the Constitution and the statutes." Contention is that this is a rather vague reference if it is intended to point directly to legal backing for government price fixing.

Obviously the administration relies upon public opinion to provide stronger ground for action of this sort than can be found in either the Constitution or the statutes. In fact, it is public opinion which for practical purposes makes government price fixing at the present time effective. And that was largely true also during the last war.

The Food and Fuel Control Act of 1917 provided for price fixing in fuels and in wheat. But the price fixing committee of the War Industries Board was able to enforce its prices in almost all fields by the backing of public opinion and the threat to withhold priorities licenses.

It is doubtful if any industry today will openly flout the prices fixed by the price administrator. If his price orders should be disregarded, he would be in an excellent position to go to Congress and ask for a law giving him power directly to establish and enforce prices. Such a law might be of far wider scope than the 1917 Act. As it is now, Congress may shrink from bestowing price fixing authority directly as long as industry cooperates in the present system.

THE DRAFTS

The Army expansion program calls for the induction of enough men to bring the draft total to 600,000 recruits by the end of the fiscal year, which is June 30. Thereafter the rate is to be 60,000 men a month. In every home from which a man has been drafted for Army training there is a desire to know how long the government will hold these men in service and what it intends to do with them.

Unfortunately the questions cannot be answered at this time. But it is probable that most of the men will be in the Army longer than the year for which they were drafted. The President can prolong their service by declaring an emergency. But it is predicted that he will ask Congress to amend the Selective Service Act to extend the mandatory service requirement.

As to what this Army will ultimately be called upon to do, it can be said only that world events will determine. The administration appears to be holding back merely to permit public opinion to overtake its decision.

But war may not call for the sending of an American army to Europe or Africa, even though the drift of events forces consideration of that drastic development. As the size of the Army grows and its relationship to families becomes more intimate, the administration's obligation to be frank and resolute in its policies becomes more binding.

NEWS BRIEFS FROM SUBURBAN TOWNS

HULMEVILLE

A motor trip to Fort Belvoir, Va., was participated in over the week-end by Mr. and Mrs. John Heng and son, "Jackie," of Neshaminy Falls; Miss Betty Berish, Trenton, N. J.; and Mr. and Mrs. Horace C. Prickett, Hulmeville. The group visited Leslie Prickett, who is now stationed at Ft. Belvoir.

"Billy" Jackson is quarantined at his home with measles.
Firemen were called yesterday afternoon to a slight fire on the property of John C. Egly, Jr., here. A pile of wood and an arbor ignited from a bon-fire, but the flames were put out by means of a hand extinguisher brought into use by William Schneider, before arrival of the companies. Hulmeville and Newport Terrace companies were among those answering the alarm.

FASHION PARADE

By Max Factor, Jr.

(Famous Hollywood Make-Up Specialist Writing For I. N. S.)
HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—The appearance of the business girl should largely reflect practicality and efficiency during her working hours.
This is a truism which simply cannot be denied. The office girl's appearance during her working moments, should not be one of the ultra-glamorous evening variety. The office head—or his wife—would not approve. Such a work-day appearance is in doubtful taste. Besides, it can easily be somewhat ridiculous.

There is, however, still another phase of this office-vs.-evening appearance problem which should be considered.

Very often the girl who appears properly practical during her working hours makes the mistake of too frequently carrying this same effect over into her evening activities.

None could object to such a practice, except on one ground; glamour, allure, and romance don't thrive on "efficient" feminine appearances of the evening.

A man may esteem a practical, efficient looking woman during working hours, but in the evening he naturally prefers the company of a woman who reflects allure and glamour. Such a preference is not confined to boy friends and sweethearts, husbands are inclined toward towards it, too.

To illustrate this point, let us select the extreme case offered by the professional appearance of a nurse. As she works, she wears an immaculate, starched white uniform. She is fastidiousness personified. Her make-up is strictly conservative, and her attire is designed for neatness, rather than glamour.

Obviously, a nurse would not elect to present this same appearance, for an evening of dining and dancing. But, we cannot escape the fact that many girls, not so extremely typed in their daytime appearances as the nurse, do carry their more conservative grooming of the day over into the evening. And, less drastically than the nurse would if she wore her uniform for her evening engagements, but still just as surely, these girls are detracting from their romantic possibilities.

A current motion picture, starring Rosalind Russell and Melvyn Douglas, offers a superb illustration of glamorous transition from office hours to those of the evening.

In the picture Miss Russell is a business woman, or a "career girl," call it what you will. Her office hour appearance reflects this fact. While this star is beautiful and glamorous during her day work interludes, the details of her grooming are still efficient and practical, as they should be for such occasions. But, viewing this picture, you can note that lovely Miss Russell definitely does not carry such an effect into her life of the evening. In the picture's evening, she is intriguing and glamorous, in every detail of her grooming, with devastating romantic effect upon Melvyn Douglas.

Check up on this subject as it pertains to yourself. See to it that you are not making the mistake of too frequently failing to hang up your career on a coat-hanger, so to speak, when your day's work is done. Remember that evening time is beauty and romance time, and that your appearance should regularly, or at least frequently, reflect this fact.

Site is Suggested for Defense Workers' Homes

It was brought out at the session that such a group of homes could be located in the Ivyland, Warmminster and Hatboro sections, with possible assistance from Hatboro for public utility service.

Borough officials of Hatboro and the surrounding districts as well as school authorities and others requested that Mrs. Woolley go to Washington on Thursday to further present the Bucks county housing situation and to ascertain additional information concerning a government-built town to house all the defense workers.

It was announced at the meeting that the Bucks County Commissioners by resolution this week, officially recognized the Bucks County Defense Council, and appointed the officers who have been serving temporarily.

The Great Game of Politics

SUCH doubts dilute the spirit of the nation and detract from the force of its operations. The truth is that the public mind is in a soggy condition, not conducive to the national unity indispensable to a really effective war and defense effort. Perhaps this is partly due to the flaws in the democratic system which prevent a completely co-ordinated pull. Partly, too, it may be because, short of actual war, it is hardly possible to get 130,000,000 heterogeneous, class-divided and group-organized people solidly united in a common purpose. Short of actual war, the country is too big to get all the people either mad or scared about the same thing at the same time.

UNQUESTIONABLY, those things are true; but it is also true that the confusion is partly due to the fact that neither firm leadership nor accurate information is coming from the President, the one man in the country in position to supply both. In recent weeks there has been increasing comment on this. A wide variety of persons are urging Mr. Roosevelt to move in certain directions. Some of these are communists and commentators; some Republicans, like Mr. Wilkie, who are in accord with his foreign policy, anxious to aid in any way they can; some are Democratic Senators, like Byrd, of Virginia, who have supported every defense request he has made; some are among his own friends within the Administration.

THE net of what these want the President to do can be summed up as follows:

1. They want him more fully and frankly to tell the American people the whole truth. He has not been doing that, and certainly some of the doubt and a lot of the confusion can be traced to that fact.
2. They want him to push aside the incompetents in his Cabinet and in key defense positions and call to his aid in this crisis the ablest men in the country, regardless of their political views—men whose records and standing inspire trust.
3. They want him to put an end to the encouragement of strikes by his Secretary of Labor, his wife, members of the NLRB and other Administration officials, and deal firmly

"THE GORGON'S MASK"

by Van Wyck Mason

SYNOPSIS

To the very rim of the Shanghai-Tientsin-Hongkong Far East war threat zone goes Capt. Hugh North to work "on the inside" for peace in the guise of Howard Nevins, big game hunter. Within the hour of his arrival at Honolulu he is warned via 'phone by a woman's voice to return to the States. That night he attends a gay party tendered by Abner Polk, wealthy American. Alluring Phédre Renoire, hostess; Baron von Rentner, German industrialist; and Hideyo Kanamura, Japanese merchant, attract North's special attention. The party ends when the corpse of an unknown nude beauty comes in on the tide to the gayly illuminated float. Later, North exonerates Coast Artillery Lieut. Wilson Clark for neglect of duty. The latter pleads his love for a mysterious Nadia Stefan, but North orders him home at once. While discussing the girl's death with Bruce Kilgour, British intelligence major, North learns via 'phone that Lieut. Clark has just died after a fall from his hotel window. North goes to the morgue and meets its keeper, Capt. Thomas Amalu. In the portentous "chilled room," North clashes with Kanamura.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

"And who did you think she was?" inquired North blandly.
Hostility stamped Kanamura's wiry body, now held very erect in his stiffly starched suit.
"May I point out, honorable sir," he stressed with a glint of shining white teeth, "that that does not concern you."

North was already deciding that Kanamura did know who the dead girl was. Moreover, the Japanese seemed very much upset at what had befallen her.

But why, since his mention of Polk's name, had Kanamura been so definitely hostile? Kanamura and Polk were supposed to be friends. . . . If he had seen that black smudge on the girl's arm—well, a great deal depended on what Tokyo really intended to do in this impending crisis.

North felt the Japanese's black eyes thrusting at his back like sword points as he turned to the Eurasian police captain and said: "Thank you very much, Captain; that's all I wanted to see. I presume," he added, "that, until the autopsy, you have no theory as to what happened to this girl?"

Captain Amalu's blue-black hair glistened a little beneath the lights as he replied: "No, but I may say that Dr. Thaxter does not think it was a case of poison."
"When will you find out?"
"Around midnight," the keeper of the morgue replied, his breath showing in tiny silvery puffs. "Please come, Mr. Kanamura. You have failed of identification, and it is against the rules to allow anyone alone with the corpses."

Though the Japanese started to protest, Captain Amalu importunately switched on the lights, leaving the six pale slabs shrouded in semidarkness. Once on the sidewalk, North held out his hand in farewell. "Good-night, Mr. Kanamura; a bit of luck that it wasn't a friend in there."

"One minute, please," the other begged. "There is something I would like to say to you, Mr. Nevins."
North turned and, towering above the alert, faintly menacing Oriental, remained silent.

"Yes?"
"I somehow cannot believe," the ship chandler began, "that Mr. Polk really sent you to the morgue."
"He did," North returned imperterbably.

"Then," Kanamura's brown features hardened perceptibly, "please do not let your friendliness for Mr. Polk carry you too far. Please take a little warning and do not try any more to find out who this girl was. It is useless."
"Why?" North demanded as he pulled out a cigarette and tapped it on the back of his hand. "You know my curiosity. . . ."

The Japanese stiffened still further as he interrupted with, "That is a very dangerous weakness, Mr. Nevins."
"Dear me, are you actually threatening me?" North's voice became suddenly edged.

Kanamura made a mechanical little bow. "Threatening you, my dear sir? Oh, not at all. I simply advised that you had better drop the matter of the unknown girl at once. Otherwise. . . ." By the starlight North saw the other's teeth glimmer almost wolfishly.

"Otherwise?"
"Who knows what the future holds?" the other murmured, turned sharply about, and strode away, his heels clicking on the cement.

On regaining his hotel quarters, Captain Hugh North, D. C. I., raised the window and for some time stared out over the harbor, where lights of shipping blinked. He stripped off his coat and re-read the telephone message he had found tucked under the door:
"Belknap will come at twelve—BRUCE."

Good old Kilgour! . . . North wished he could rid his mind of the ominous conversations overheard on Honolulu's restless streets.

"Yeah," a brawny sailor had said to his fellow, "let 'em come—let 'em start something. We're ready for the yellow monkeys."
A girl, swinging by on the arm of a soberly dressed young American, had gushed, "Oh, I hope they come—I might see a battle! I was too young to remember anything of the World War."

Then, too, in North's mind was stamped impressions of Honolulu's hordes of Japanese—some with heads bowed and eyes averted; others timidly pretending that there was no ground for uneasiness; and still others, evidently re-servists, swaggering about.

Heaven help Hawaii, and the rest of the world, if the Four Grim Horsemen began riding!
Presently North seated himself, took out a notebook and made the following series of entries:

1. Who is the murdered woman?
(a) Why did Phédre Renoire seem pleased to see her dead?
- (b) What was she to Kanamura?
- (c) Why was she murdered?
2. Why was Wang Tso Kin able so suddenly to resume his offensive in China at the end of April?
3. Why did Kanamura drop his glass at the mention of Nadia Stefan's name?
4. What was the cause and meaning of the scratch on the naked corpse's neck?
(a) Who had altered it?
5. For whom was the hairpin message originally intended?

Hostility stamped Kanamura as he faced the American in the morgue after interrupting the latter's post-mortem . . .

"New Hope Music" to Sponsor Concerts at County Playhouse

New Hope Music, composed of music lovers from Bucks and the surrounding Delaware Valley region, will sponsor the forthcoming concerts of the orchestra of the New Friends of Music at the Bucks County Playhouse, New Hope, on Saturday, May 31st, as its initial attraction. The matinee and evening performances by the noted orchestral group, which marks its first appearance in or around Philadelphia, will provide a rare opportunity for lovers of fine music.

Under the direction of Dr. Fritz Stiedry, the noted chamber orchestra of thirty pieces will play music by Haydn, Bach, Mozart and Schubert. The New Hope Library Association will be the beneficiary of the concerts.

New Hope Music hopes to provide the Bucks County community with an annual Spring festival of fine concerts. If the forthcoming concerts are a success, a longer series will be booked next season. David M. Freudenthal, of Solebury, chairman of the group, stated, "New Hope Music is a non-profit making organization, which has as its purpose the bringing of fine music to our community. Great music is so often enhanced when it is played in a beautiful sylvan setting. With the co-operation of Delaware Valley residents it will be possible to book attractions each Spring that will make living here even more enjoyable. The Bucks County Playhouse with its comfortable rural atmosphere, excellent acoustics and facilities is ideal for our purposes."

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

Weaving an absorbing story around the daring exploits of a glamorous fortune hunter who preys on susceptible men of wealth, "Play Girl" stars Kay Francis in the type of scintillating role that established the actress as one of Hollywood's most popular and fashionable stars. Heading a distinguished supporting cast are James Ellison and lovely Mildred Coles, romantic leads, at the Grand Theatre today.

With its background swiftly moving from Lake Placid to Miami, New York to Chicago, and various luxurious hotels at swanky summer and winter resorts, the story traces the spectacular career of an alluring woman of the world who is forty but looks thirty, thanks to a life of leisure financed by huge sums of money deftly wheedled out of rich playboys by breach of promise suits and fancy blackmail.

BRISTOL THEATRE

"The Devil Commands," newest thrill-hit, opening today at the Bristol Theatre, stars Karloff as a scientist searching for a method of communicating with the dead! Believing that an electrical machine can be developed which will project enough energy into a human body to make contact with the world beyond, Karloff cold-bloodedly sacrifices human lives to further his invention.

There's a new screen sleuth coming today to the Bristol Theatre, and he's different from all the rest. He's 20th Century-Fox's "Michael Shayne, Private Detective" and the question the film poses is "Will Shayne catch the killer... or will the police catch Shayne?"

RITZ THEATRE

Hotly topical and produced on a spectacular scale with the co-operation of the British Admiralty, the new, Michael Balcon production "Convoy" is proving itself a tremendously thrilling piece of dramatic fare at the Ritz Theatre this week.

With a magnificent cast headed by Clive Brook, John Clements, Edward Chapman and Judy Campbell, it shows, in the course of its fictional situations, the manner in which the much discussed convoy system is operated.

BRISTOL RALLIES LATE AND DEFEATS TRENTON CATHOLIC

Home Run by Boccardo and Triple by Yates Clinch The Game

HOPKINS PITCHES WIN

Jackson Poles Homer For The Visitors With Three Men On Bases

By Jack Gill

Bristol High School's bats came back to life yesterday afternoon at the local ball orchard, when the Cardinals notched their second consecutive win over Trenton Catholic by a 10 to 9 count. Previous to this batting outburst, which produced ten hits, the homesters had made only seven hits in fourteen innings of league ball.

Local fans are now keyed for Friday's game with Bensalem. Heading the Lower Bucks loop, the Owls are hot after the conference title and have lost but one game to George School by a one run tally. The fray will be played on the Bristol field and fur is expected to fly either from the Owl or the Bunny.

The last victory was one of those hipper dipper things. Trenton counted four runs in the first inning. Van Horn walked and Ryan, Price, Bannon, Derwent and Carlin hit safely. But Bristol came back with three tallies to make the count read 4-3. Accardi led off with a double and Tazik was safe on Carlin's error. Both boys advanced on Boccardo's infield rap and Army Capriotti singled them home. Sagolla walked and Capriotti scored when Price muffed Mangiaracini's liner.

Fireworks kept popping in the second. With Bannon, Petrino and Carlin perched on the cushions, Bob Jackson poled a home run that cleared the base paths of congestion. Pitcher Jimmy Hopkins, who later was to hang around and win, nearly fell off the mound. But persistence of effort pays, and he stuck it out to gain his first major triumph of the season.

Campion's crew stayed in the ball game in their half of the second. Tazik again reached first on an error and Boccardo drove him home with a line homer. Capriotti drew a base on balls and Sagolla sent him scampering across by driving out a double. It was 8 to 6, Trenton's advantage, after two innings of play. None of it was dull, either.

Trenton added another in the third. From then on it was all home town stuff. In the fifth Sagolla walked and Iannucci sacrificed him to second. Mangiaracini drove him home with a single. Then Herb Yates delivered a telling triple that scored Mangiaracini. He later scored himself on Hopkins' rap. This tied the game in knots at 9-9.

Tazik continued to habitate first base as he poled out a single to start the sixth. Boccardo and Capriotti hit easy flies to left. Sagolla walked and the stage was set. Iannucci sent a hopper down to Price at first who graciously made a bobble and Tazik trickled home triumphantly.

BENSALEM BLANKS LOWER MORELAND NINE

By Jack Gill

Bensalem High School continued to raise havoc with local scholastic baseball opposition yesterday at Lower Moreland as they defeated Skeets Anglemeyer's club by a 7 to 0 score.

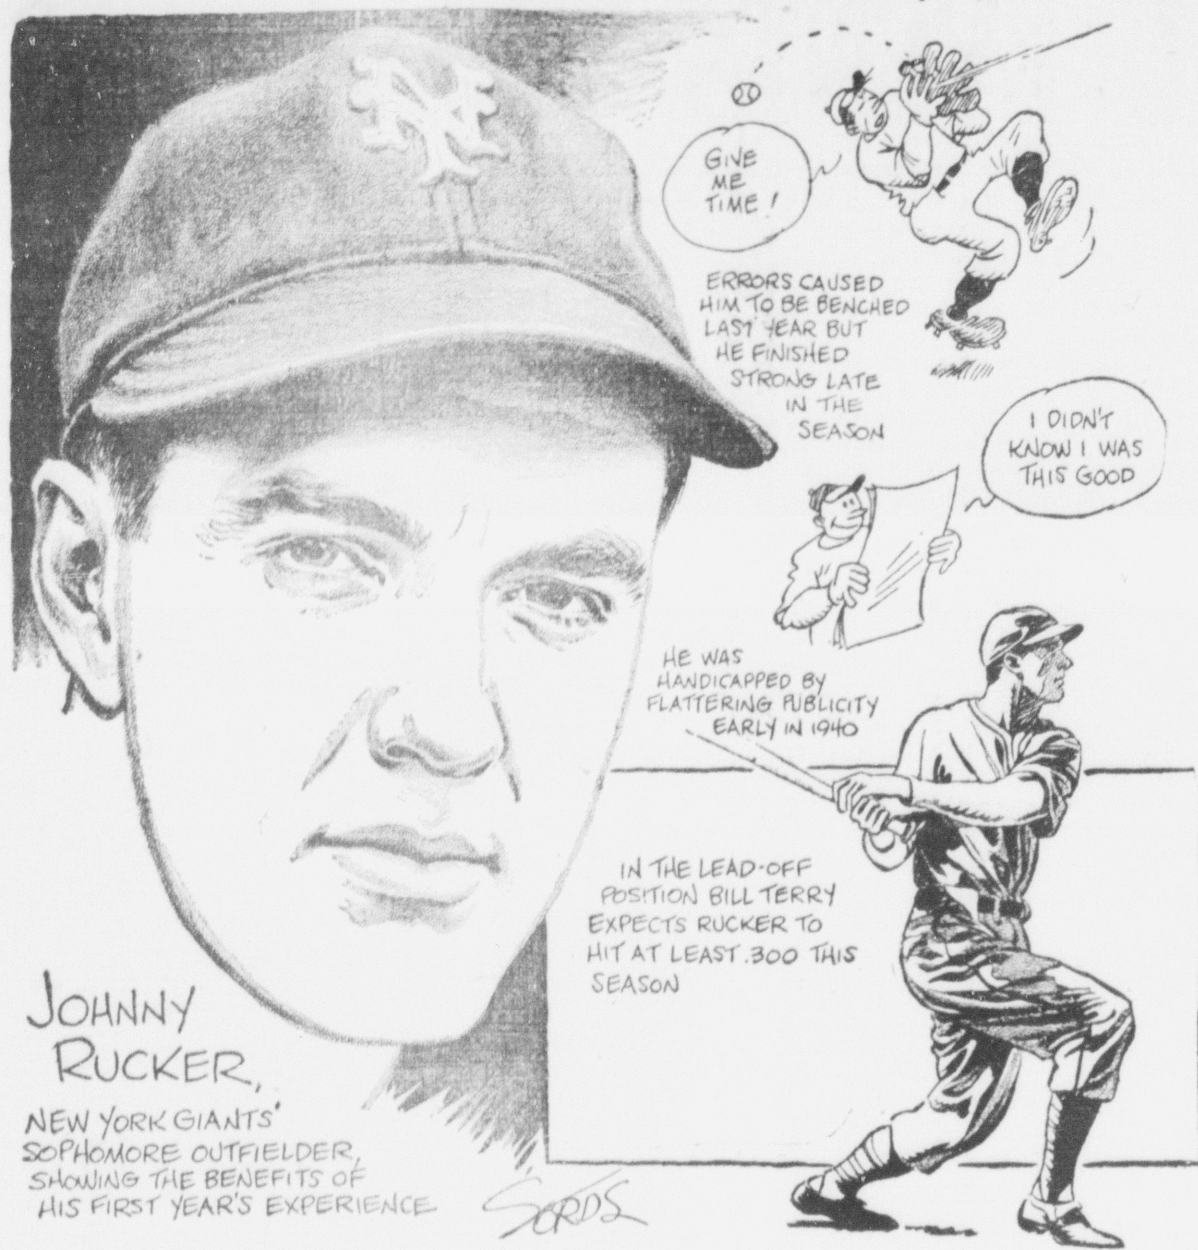

Up until the fifth inning the Owls were silent. A pitcher's duel was raging between Dan Ridgeway and Roberts. But the Cornwells Heights contingent broke out with a three run flareup and the game was put on ice.

Fleming opened up with a single and Roberts sacrificed him to second. Hamor singled him home and went to second on the throw in. Jones, next up, popped a little fly to pitcher Ridgeway. In his effort to set the papers screaming with a double play act, he threw wild to second. Hamor naturally went to third. Center fielder McOwen, backing the play up, threw a hasty shot in an effort to catch Hamor sliding into third. This went over the head of R. Ridgeway and Hamor came home faster than MacMittell came down the Penn Relay backstretch.

Bensalem picked up two more in the sixth and another pair in the final frame. Killian delivered a timely wallop in the sixth frame, while successive slaps by Scheerer, Strickler and Killian paved the way in the seventh.

Roberts pitched a masterful game in hurling the Owls to victory. He raved up but four hits and struck out six men. It was one of the steadiest pitched ball games the hard hitting Owls have received all season. Lower Moreland used four hurlers in D. Ridgeway, R. Ridgeway, Merrick and

Continued From Page One Soviet-Nazi Rupture Looms As Possibility

London, Apr. 30.—Possibility of a definite rupture between Soviet Russia and Germany—favored dream of pro-British "wishful thinkers" ever since the war began—moved a step closer to reality today with Moscow's announcement that 12,000 German troops have been landed at Abo in Finland.

Disclosure in the Communist party newspaper Pravda and over the Moscow radio that a Nazi division, complete with tanks and artillery, had taken up this strategic position caused a flurry of excitement in London.

Optimists rushed to the conclusion that the announcement was an indirect but forceful warning to Germany that such steps do not meet with Russia's approval. But even more conservative quarters were inclined to regard it as an indication that Moscow is becoming increasingly perturbed over the possibility that Adolf Hitler may be getting ready for his "Drang Nach Osten."

Many persons are convinced that Hitler has early plans for this "drive to the east" and that the Finnish move marks an important step in this direction. One of these, it may be presumed, is Prime Minister Churchill. It will be remembered that in his world broadcast last Sunday, he again warned Russia that Hitler may have designs upon the granary of the Ukraine and the oil fields of the Caucasus.

But from other sources have come reports of German plans for an eventual clash with Russia, which if successful from the Nazi viewpoint would give Hitler sufficient materials to wage war almost forever.

house, explained that a typical Sunday began as follows:

Five o'clock, the "boys," who are natives, begin performing the household duties. No women are employed as household servants or domestics; all the work is done by boys.

6:30, Rev. and Mrs. Davis get up, have their breakfast and morning devotions are held. Lunches, which have been packed in safari boxes by the boys in the house, are collected and Rev. and Mrs. Davis get ready to leave in their car.

Perhaps they will drive 20 miles before making a stop and holding their first service. "We preach all morning until noon and then have our lunch and continue our preaching until twilight," he said.

Rev. Davis, who speaks English as though he respected and loved every syllable rather than the sloppy, characteristic American way of slurring words, said they call it a day at about seven o'clock.

"We contact quite a few hundred natives, many of whom have professed their belief in the Christian religion. We always have hearers; they are always very attentive and respectful, very respectful," he added thoughtfully.

"You won't find one rude native in a thousand," continued Rev. Davis, who emphasized that despite the great illiteracy which exists many of the natives are linguists and can speak a language beautifully and accurately although they may not be able to read and write.

"The native's chief food is maize, a form of corn, and although they grow peas, sweet potatoes, cabbages, beets and other vegetables they lack our customary taste. The vegetables lack in taste and the savory qualities which we like in them because some of the minerals are absent in the soil in which they are grown."

Rev. Davis said the English government has provided fine schools, where the natives are taught, and hospitals and dispensaries.

"The dispensaries, in some cases are
